Pastor's Pondering

Do you adopt new year's resolutions? I have hopes for the new year, but I have never really made a resolution to adopt new behavior in a new year.

Our family conducts "end of year interviews." Amy finds or develops a set of questions, and we each answer them based on our experiences in the past year. As the years go by, we review old interviews and remember what was important to us and events or experiences that we had. Even in the short-term, it is valuable to review and evaluate the last year.

Remembering is a far better exercise for the new year than resolving. While there is "choosing" language in the Bible, God's people are called to "remember" far more often—to remember God's goodness and grace, to remember His commandments, etc. It is by remembering that we build hope for the future.

- Blessings, David
