

VLBI Provides Both Rolling Admission and Semester System Options

1. Rolling Admissions for Flexibility

- Rolling admissions allow prospective students to apply, be accepted, and begin coursework at any time, accommodating those who cannot wait for the next semester to start.
- This approach works particularly well for programs where students can study independently or join ongoing courses (e.g., online programs or modular course formats).

2. Semester System for Structure

- The semester system provides a structured academic calendar with defined start and end dates, which is beneficial for group learning, synchronized progress, and planning.
- Students utilizing this format follow the semester schedule, with deadlines for assignments, exams, and final grades.

3. How They Work Together

- New Students Starting Mid-Semester: Students admitted through rolling admissions can start coursework independently, depending on the program structure, and join the next full semester when it begins.
- Flexible Courses: Modular, self-paced, or asynchronous courses can be offered for rolling admissions students, aligning them with semester-based cohorts at key points.
- Clear Transition Points: Students admitted mid-semester can transition smoothly into the semester system at the next term.
