Atlanta, GA – 2018 has been a banner year thus far for Integrity Transformations. The Community Development Corporation is poised to move into a newly built facility next door to Westside Works' building on Joseph E. Lowery. In addition, Integrity Transformations' Board has added three new members to assist with guiding programmatic and workforce development growth. The organization recently finalized a three-year strategic plan that focuses on enhancing services, developing diversified income streams, and bolstering fundraising ventures.

The new facility's address is 283 Joseph E. Lowry and will house Intake and Employment Services, weekly Westside Works Program Orientation sessions, and other initiatives to assist needs of Atlanta's Westside residents. In addition to office space, the state-of-the-art facility allows clients to register for services, engage in one-on-one counseling sessions with case managers, and to learn of training programs and employment opportunities.

As directed by Integrity Transformations' strategic plan, the organization has successfully added new Board members with expertise in the specific areas of human capital, strategic management and fundraising development.

Nicole Barrett

Nicole Barrett, Vice President of Client Services at Career Spa, is an accomplished HR professional with over 10 years of experience in the public and private sectors of Human Capital, including 5 years with global professional services firms Deloitte and Ernst and Young, with a specialization in career development, talent management, assessments, training, learning and development, and talent acquisition. She is an effective consultant with expertise and strong experience in the area of customer experience transformation from strategy through to implementation, and has been responsible for implementing human resource management strategies that have enabled fortune 500 companies to recruit, train, and retain a high performing and talented workforce. Nicole has led the design, development and delivery of multi-dimensional cross-functional solutions to clients, bringing together strategy, business process design, organizational change, and change management.

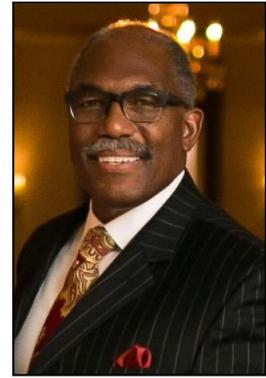

Milton Clipper

Milton Clipper's career in management spans over 40 years in the media industry. In 2015 he retired after serving as the founding President & CEO of Atlanta Educational Telecommunications Collaborative, the managing arm of Public Broadcasting Atlanta (PBA). Starting in 1995 Milt positioned these struggling public television (PBS) and radio stations (NPR) to be among the best in the country. Prior to his successful run with PBA, his first introduction into media was with Post NewsWeek (Washington Post, WTOP TV and WJXT TV). After almost twenty years with Post NewsWeek, Milt left to run his own successful advertising agency that served a number of national companies. He returned to the media industry to oversee membership, marketing and creative services for WHMM (now WHUT), Howard University's Public Broadcasting Station (PBS). After Milt's retirement, he was inspired to use his strategic management and marketing skills to establish the consulting service, Clipper and Company. It focuses on effectively changing how organizations think about and design sustainable strategic plans from the bottom up.

Jeanne Ward

Jeanne Ward is a Strategist and Consultant who brings her knowledge of psychology, strategy, management, and personal fulfillment to her current work. Jeanne started her career by helping mentally ill inmates to 'get their lives back on track' as they integrated back into society from jail in NYC. She leveraged this experience with a Social Work degree to manage teams who were supporting people trying to move back into the workforce. She later lived in Atlanta, GA and Frankfurt, Germany where she began consulting with nonprofit organizations to guide them on their strategy, fundraising development, volunteer development, and organizational development as well as to support the growth of their leaders and board of directors. Jeanne works with the technology division of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta to help with them with strategy and performance monitoring and reporting. In this role, she uses the Balanced Scorecard approach to help her division to reach their intended results.

These three individual will assist Integrity Transformations' as it seeks to achieve its mission: to transform the residents and neighborhoods of English Avenue, Vine City and other contiguous 30314 and 30318 communities through mechanisms of economic empowerment, affordable housing options and motivational case management, which will promote self-sufficiency. By pursuing and executing this mission, Integrity will uplift and enhance the Westside community as a positive place to live, work and worship.
